New Home for the Knickerbocker Canon

The members of the Knickerbocker Cano-Club are discussing the question of moving their club house from its present location at the foot of West 152d street and the Hudson River, where it has been for the last twenty years, to some point either further up the river or out on Long Island Sound. When the house was first built the neighborhood was very thinly settled, and there were no other boat houses in the viand there were no other boat houses in the vicinity of the club house, but within the last few years so many boat and bath houses have been built near the club house, and so many boats are now anchored near it, that it is sometimes dangerous work to steer a crew through the maze of craft. It is impossible to hold a regatta there, and the club has not attempted it for three or four years, but has held its races at Egg Beach, five miles up the river.
The present site is also upon the line of Twelfth avenue, and when that street is opened through that part of the city the club will be compelled to move any way. The members are strongly opposed to moving out of the city limits, and the new location, when chosen, will probably be only a few miles up the Hudson. Riverdale is favored by several members. The club has a fund accumulating for the purpose, which was established over a year ago,

CLIFFORD DEFEATS HENRY OF NA-VARRE AT GRAVESEND. gomer, and Prince Karl-Turf Notes. Clifford defeated Henry of Navarre in the second special at Gravesend yesterday afteron after a most superb race, only a few Inches separating the great horses at the wire, and the question of the supremacy on the running turf is no nearer a solution than it was before Domino met Clifford at Sheepshead Bay. Only a race between Domino, Henry of Navarre, and Clifford will now satisfy the racing public. Mr. A. Hen-nen Morris, on behalf of the New York Jockey Club, is already in the field with an offer of $5,000 for a race between the horses named, to be run on Saturday, Oct. 6, at Morris Park, the distance to be one mile and a furlong. Secretary McIntyre of the Virginia Jockey Club is also ready to bring the rivals together, and offers for the opening of the St. Asaph course, near Washington, a stake of $7,500, of which $1,500 will go to the second horse, the distance of the race to be one mile and a half, the race to be run on Yesterday was an ideal day for such a contest as that between Clifford and Navarre. The sun shone brightly from a sky of the most delicate blue and the emerald carpet of the infield was strewn with the bright blossoms of the golden The track was as fast as hands could make it, and everybody looked for a good race, with a preponderance of the talent of the opinion that Henry of Navarre would win, for had not the chestnut run a dead heat within week and had not Domino vanquished Ciifford at a mile in the most handy fashion imaginable? But the talent did not stop to consider the fact that Clifford had improved since passing into the hands of J. W. Rogers; that he weighed at least fifty pounds more than on the day he was sold for $25,000 to L. Rose, and that the day was bright and clear, with the air as free from moisture as though the race course was laid out on the topmost plateau of the Adirondacks. Henry of Navarre having been indulged after his race with Domino, and, blind to everything but the most recent happening, they rushed to the ring and threw their money at the book-warm favorite at 2 to 1 on, while 23; to 1 could

After Clifford warmed up there was a flutter in the paddeck and the betting ring on the part of the railbirds, for the bay horse could fairly fly, and Jack Bennett and others who watch horses closely and make money out of their knowledge, took a chance on the son of Bramble, particularly as the odds were to their liking. Henry of Navarre seemed a trifle lighter than usual, but he was applauded the moment he appeared upon the track, his matchless beauty, high speed, and sterling courage having made him a great favorite with the public, who have seen him tried by fire many times. The start was made with Clifford at the pole, but Buggett at once sent Henry of Navarre out into the open daylight, and passing the stand the first time the golden chestnut was a length and a half before the bay, both going smoothly, but at a pace which presaged a fast race. Up the backstretic Clifford's mouth was wide open and he was only galloping behind his gallant adversary. The order was the Clifford went up to Henry of Navarre on the upper turn, just as Navarre did on Domino, and the partisans of the four-year-old shouted the old cry.

"He's got him?"

Clifford's jaws were distended and Simms was sitting still. Doggett kicked Navarre a couple of times, and the game three-year-old taking a fresh hold of the bit sprang forward with renewed vigor. Still Clifford strode by his side under a pull, and when the homstretch was entered and the race in carnest began it was any odds that Clifford would win, for the three-year-old was seemingly doing his best, while the four-year-old had not yet been asked for his mightiest effort by Simms.

But there were persons in that crowd of 10,000 persons in the grand stand and on the lawn who had seen Hanquet come to Henry of Navarre quite as easily and with as much speed in re-serve as Clifford seemed to possess and yet suffer defeat. Those who had their money on Henry of Navarre did not give up the ghost by any means. They shouted words of encouragement to Doggett, and the jockey redoubled his exer-tions on the favorite. Like a lion the stanch colt answered the stinging whip and the burn-ing spir, and, springing forward at the last fur-long pole, he thrust his head in front as though he meant to keep it there. The assaults on record contemplated by Chase Kilpatrick, and Lee bore no fruit, as far as new figures were concerned, but each event devel-oped a splendid race, which consoled all concerned outside the disappointed champions themselves. Chase had only his own week-old record to go for, which may account for his lack of perseverance toward the end of the race. Klipatrick's task was a particularly hard one, and he had such a gap to close before reaching the men in front that his failure is scarcely a matter of wonder. Lee's effort to improve the 300-yard figures was Lee's effort to improve the 300-yard figures was a superbone and he was only an infinitesimal fraction behind the record when the tape was reached. It was apparent from the first that the track, although dry, was by no means fast, and the infield would also have been the better of a little more drying out.

The steeplechase created general merriment. The course was mapped out on the infield turf, and each circuit was punctuated with obstacles, including furze-topped hurdles, a stone wall, and a water jump. The latter was ten feet wide by four in depth. A double hurdle was placed in front, and after a few laps Walsh and Hjertberg took alternate baths, to the intense delight of the onlookers. The band caught the contagion after a while and greeted every dive with a crash of instruments which intensified the effect. The bandicapping in the high jumps was so closely figured that the three placed men reached the same gross height. In the other events the finishes were also keenly fought out with tew exceptions, and altogether the meeting is entitled to take high rank among its fifty-two preceessors. Summaries:

Champion Lee was set to concede unusually large starts, but his ability was not overrated by the handlearper. He won the second heat from George Sands in the rastest time of the trials, and the same pair were the contending factors finishing the float. While Kilpatrick started with designs on the record, Walsh devoted his attention strictly to winning the first medal. He made the best possible use of his rather liberal start, and was with the leaders comfortably before half the distance. Daiby set a hot pace from the limit mark, and led to the turn for home. Then Walsh moved up and won by about three yards. Kilpatrick ran a dashing stern chases all the way, but had too big a gap to close up. He wasmaking up his leeway rapidly toward the end, and finished within ten yards of the winner. He was, however, a long way off the world's record of 2 minutes 13 seconds, made by L. E. A burdle was removed for M. P. Halpin, who had the limit of ten yards. He had only nine obstacles to face, but the others had to go the obstacles to face, but the others had to go the full flight, each competitive having a separate set of obstacles. Chase got into his stride rapidly, and went along at record speed until he drew clear of his rivals at the eighth hurdle. His run to the finish was not up to his usual form, and he just missed duplicating the world's record he established last Saturday by a fifth of a second. The others finished well together, about four yards behind the champion. four yards behind the champion.

C. second A. J. Walsh, X. A. A., third. Time, 12 minutes 18 4.5 seconds.

The three athlotes named were the only starters. Herthern led for a few laps closely attended by Walsh, white Orton was content to trail behind. Before half the distance had been reaversed the water jump proved too much for Walsh, who went into it head first. Orton them moved into second place, and soon had Hjertberg's measure. He romped into the lead a few laps from home, and won by a couple of hundred yards. The ex-champion found great difficulty in petting over the obstacles for the last half mile, but kept going fast enough to secure the second medal. Walsh took his ten successive duckings in the water like an otter, and troited in a leisurely third.

Fuffer drew away from his rivals after crossing the first hurdle and won as he pleased. He got a trifle mixed up on the curve, owing to the fact that the hurdles were placed thirty-two yards anart, and did not finish with his usual dash. His performance becomes a record for 357 yards, no race at the distance having been held before.

Three-hundred-yard run scratch—Won by T. I. Lee, N. Y. A. C., it S. i. jons, N. Y. A. C., second; George Sands, N. Y. A. C., infed. Time, it 35 geometric drew inside position and kept Lee well.

Lyons drew inside position and kept Lee well out an the first curve. Lee drew clear going down the backstretch and sprinted away from his field at a great pace. His stride shortened nearing the tape and his club mates closed uprapidly. Lyons came particularly strong, but Lee breasted the tape a good six yards in front. Sands was third half that distance behind Lyons. Had Lee had the pole he would have shaken the world's record of 31% seconds, made by Len Myers, New York, Oct. 22, 1881.

THE MESSRS. SANFORD IN LUCK. Their Horse Laurente a Stre of English Winners.

The great English two-year-old Whittier, who recently won both the Prince of Wales Plate and the Convivial Produce Stakes, beating the flower of the English two-year-olds, is by Laureate (by Rosicrucian-Laura), now owned by Mesers, Stephen Sanford & Sons of Amsterdam, N. Speaking of Whittler the Sporting Life of Bept. 1 says: "As anticipated, Whittler proved the crack performer of the week, the lengthy young Laurente sweeping off the Prince of young Laureate sweeping off the Prince of Wales Plate and the Convivial Stakes. Evident-ly Whittier has fair claims to be considered quite in the first flight of the two-year-olds. The Field of Sept. I says: "Whittier, the happily named and sturdily built son of Laureate, soon collared Keelson, whom he best in a stride or two at the tand, and, running on like a steam engine to the finish, Mr. Russell's coltwho is little if anything behind the best of the year-won in dashing style. At or about the same time Poet's Corner, another son of Laureate, carried off both the Zetland Plate and the great National Breeders' Foal Stakes, for three-year-olds.

GOOD-BY, OLD KINGSTON.

Kingston retires from the turf with the highest honors, and it is a remarkable fact that, though he has started in almost as many races and has certainly won as many as almost any and has certainly won as many as almost any horse that was ever foaled, he goes from the scene of his triumphs as sound as the day he was foaled. He was troubled at times with rheumatism in the shoulders, but his legs are like bars of iron. As a race horse Kingston was among the mightiest that ever wore iron in this ceuntry, winning at all distances from half a mile to one mile and three-quarters. He was bred by James Cushman of this city, who sold him to M. F. Dwyer tor $15,000, because he believed that in Esquimau, who was then in his stable, he had a mightier race horse. In the stud Kingston's name should live.

The Englishmen, however, did splendid work in the field, and their picking up and quick returns of hot grounders compared very favorably with the Philadelphians' work. De Trafford at cover point came in for his share of Equitable General Providing Co. at point for the Philadelphians, and A. M. Wood at short slip was as vigilant and agile as a cat,

The evenness of the scoring of Bohlen and Wood was a subject for general comment, for when Wood got out Bohlen had made just one more run. On being joined by Muir. Bohlen gave a hard chance to Whitwell at mid-on, and he showed his appreciation of the let-off by getting the next ball to the ropes at leg. He then started to score freely, and he had soon a half century to his credit, Muir played steadily, while Rohlen made the runs. Several changes in the lowling were made without effect. As Bohlen neared Lord Hawke's score many of the spectators were anxious to see him pass it, and every hit was enthusiastically cleered. When at length a hit for three gave him seventy-nine, the cheers were loud and long. Muir, who had taken forty minutes to make eleven runs, was then bowled by Whitwell, the partnership having yielded fifty-two.

Bohlen soon followed Muir, being stumped by Robinson. The next few wickets fell with startling rapidity. Hillyard and Whitwell were the bowlers, and bofh men were doing splendid work, the batsmen finding the latter especially difficult. Noble stayed only for a brace before he returned one softly to the Durham man. Ralston could only secure a single when he was bowled by Hillyard. Dr. J. Allison Scott, captain of the team, was unable to crack his duck. Five wickets had fallen for 153 runs and now nine wickets were down for 163 runs. All hopes rested on J. B. King and H. P. Baily. They made a desperate effort to reach the Englishmen's total, but they could not make it, the side being finally disposed of for 169, or eighteen runs to the Bad.

lishmen's total, but they could not make it, the side being finally disposed of for 169, or eighteen runs to the bad.

The interval was then taken for luncheon, and when the Englishmen again went in to but they had a most disastrous opening. C. W. Wright and A. J. L. Hill were the first men to face the bowling of King and Baily, and with only eleven on the board the Nottingham man was dismissed for only two runs. R. S. Lucas, however, made things pretty lively, and runs came fairly fast while he was at the wickets. The bowling was changed frequently before a separation was effected, and the total had then advanced to fifty-seven, when the Middlesex amateur was bowled by Clark after a contribution of twenty-five.

Hill soon followed Lucas after a carefully played innings, which this time yielded him 32 runs. Then Lord Hawke, who arrived at the grounds shortly after luncheon, was joined by C. E. De Trafford. Another good stand resulted, and before the Leicestershire captain was beautifully caught at point by Scott off King the total had advanced to 95, of which the retiring batsman had scored 24.

The wickets fell pretty cheaply then, Bathurst, Robinson, and Hillyard aiding but five runs between them. Lord Hawke, however, played with unusual care, After Mordaunt had joined him runs came slowly but surely, and before another wicket fell forty had been added to the total. Lord Hawke was at the wickets one hour and twenty minutes for his inning of thirty-nine, and it was the most patient effort he has ever been credited with. Mordaunt on being joined by Bardswell continued his good work, and when time was called these men were still unseparated, while the total had advanced to 178 for eight wickets. The game will be resumed on Monday morning. The score:
